

Classical Associations of Places in Italy (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Classical Associations of Places in Italy The purpose of this book is to bring together passages from Latin and Greek authors for the lovers of Italy and the classics, whether those who stand in the actual presence of landscape and monument, or those who contemplate them in memory or imagination. Such persons will need neither introduction to the pages that follow nor instruction in the manner of their use. It is not the authors intention either to be exhaustive in the matter of citations or to make a critical edition of the text. Economy, if not regard for the reader, forbids the admission of passages not of principal importance; and to reduce to absolute uniformity a text of such extent and such variety of authorship and assembled perforce from so many different editions, has seemed, in view of the purpose of the volume, an unnecessary and an uncalled-for labor. For occasional instances where the text is not followed accurately by the translation, the author asks the readers indulgence; she has not felt at liberty to make changes in versions not her own except as the interests of English idiom made them essential.
