

A Radio Romance Just call me Hope

A Radio Romance When Dana Hunter steps into the work lift, she is horrified when it breaks down leaving her and another woman trapped and suspended. Liz Peters quickly calms her and distracts her with a conversation. Liz is tall, attractive and Dana finds herself instantly attracted to her. When Dana is panicking, Liz knows just how to calm her and does so with a passionate kiss. The women quickly discover an attraction which leads to an intense romantic interlude before the lift is fixed. The women agree to meet again when the radio show they work for travel to Lyme Regis for their big weekend of music and radio. As workers for the show, they find themselves busy in the day but free at night to share a hotel room and get to know each other a little better. Will the women discover a relationship to build on or is this simply a summer fling? Find out in...A Radio Romance. Just call me Hope Annie Winters books a weekend break in the beautiful location of Hope Cove on the South Coast of England. While there she meets a woman at dinner who she is immediately attracted to. The two quickly become intimate, but without exchanging personal details about who they are. Annie tells her to just call me Hope, and knows her lover as only J. The two agree to meet again, in the same hotel, the following weekend. An affair follows which is heady, intense and incredibly passionate. Annie enjoys the freedom of being with her lover without the pressures of outside life. How long can they continue their charade? Will their true identities finally be revealed? Will it change how they feel each other? Find out in...Just call me Hope.
